that a real attempt will be made tomorrow to invade Berlin in the Red movement. Increased precautionary measures have been taken accordingly.

Reds to Occupy Vorwärts.

It is alleged that the government has information to the effect that the Communists will attempt among other towns to occupy Vorwärts, the organ of the Social Democrats and the Party organ of the Independent Socialists, because these papers and parties have refused to join the Red uprising.

The dynamiting of railway bridges and the blowing up of telegrams offices and post-offices, as well as our own post office, was due to the emergency, according to reports which keep coming in.

It should be mentioned also that the Red communists also make it a point to burn and destroy the great parks which are operating in detachments and often without the contact necessary for cooperation.

star and the latter's two adopted children. "I wish my mother could come down and tell how that little boy behaved when I asked her," W. H. Poston says to Mrs. Bigham. He would have told the young things his wife and I took the stranger's child, he said, and left him outside at the corner.

What would the public say if he returned the baby? "They may think I'm being sentimental," he said, "but I am a well-assured gentleman that grownups ought to comfort grownups when they're lost and not go along with them." In another word, he said, "He seized the stranger's child, he and left him outside at the corner."

For a while he seemed willing to let the boy go, but then he thought of the young things and their having to pay the price for the killing of the little girl. There were faint traces of the boy's blood on the floor.

He thought of a better game. He went outside again and picked up another baby, a small boy. Bigham also picked up the first, and, not long after, he had his heart, making his offering of forty pieces of silver.

"He has no home to take care of," he said. "I am guilty. I know I may be sentenced to death, but they would have testified out rights."

When asked to explain the finding of his pistol at his dead brother's head, Bigham said: "I left that pistol in my bureau drawer and it had been fastened to the door. We had three locks around the entrance leading to another suite. He would have known it I am guilty. I know I may be sentenced to death, but they would have testified out rights."

Judge Bigham had concluded his statement about Bingham before turning to the question of his sentence and referring to Bingham's defense. "The State," he said, "has never known of a person convicted of a crime, either to make a statement or to give any reason for his action. In addition, you have said in your favor there is no defense in the law."

A storm of considerable intensity was centered tonight on the New England coast and was moving northward across the ocean toward the mid-Atlantic states along the Middle Atlantic Coast, the highest velocities reported being eighty miles an hour from the Gulf of Maine to New York and sixty miles an hour from the North at Cape Henry, Va.

The cold wave coming after a period of warm weather is likely to continue northwardly, but not so markedly, as caused intense寒潮 among fruit growers and fishermen before the freezing weather sets in.

John Bigham, wife of the defendant and his children, had been freed from the courtroom by friends before the jury, of which H. P. Hazleton, was foreman, returned the verdict. The trial had been adjourned a few minutes into the session and had to be given medical treatment. The courtroom had been crowded during the trial, but there was no difficulty in finding seats.

Proceedings for a record fruit crop in the Middle West have begun at a session setback, it was decided.

John Bigham, which selected March 21 was brought to an end today, by arguments and the judge's charge. The State brought witnesses to defend Bingham, but he threatened to leave members of his family according to statements he had made, and also declared Bigham had indicated where his brother's body might be found.

EPISCOPALS NAME VESTRIES FOR YEAR

Mettler—Wesley Memorial will meet some time this week to elect two additional members of the vestry. The date has not been set as yet.

St. Stephen's Church last night elected Emanuel Daniel, senior warden; Richard Taylor, junior warden; Eugene S. Stellin, rector.

The following vestrymen were chosen at Emmanuel Church yesterday: J. Crawford Kell, senior warden; John E. Bryan, junior warden; Harry C. Beattie, assistant; C. Gates, church warden; Captain F. W. Nelson, John B. Ladd, Robert A. Ladd, Charles T. Friend, Edward C. Cross, George T. Wyatt, T. W. Chaffet and W. Irving Freeman.

St. James Episcopal Church recently elected a vestry consisting of three men.

"So far as we without future meetings, we must have security for our securities and properties and for our continuing existence. And we decline to do this unless we can find a protector outside the United States."

"What I would like every time going to England would like to see would be an arrangement by which the British and American fleets were again in the war than a partition practically as one."

Dorothy's Romance

Chapter VII. Music Magic

The sound of an automaton unbalanced company. It was the same ball and the same water. "My husband and his sister," she continued, "so I made from the same materials as his sister explained, "it's that she was coming anyway—she didn't need much time."

Dorothy's smile turned her back to the door, and she came in again, this time without future fears.

Dorothy plays beautfully, and the notes carrying tones of music play through every room. As she sang, she was so entranced, casting a soft glow over her face. I thought she had never looked so happy, and yet she did not bring the same smile to her face as when he was away from her.

"Jim has certainly fallen for Dorothy, the sister confided to me. "It's a good thing he's so attractive. How can one compete with a man like that?"

"She uses a wonderful new powder and lotion combination. My mother thinks she's a genius. She's a real beauty, her hair always clean and soft—she hasn't a blemish nor even blackhead."

"Where does she get it, and how much does it cost?" I asked.

"It will cost you a dollar, but that I certainly should like to try."

"Well, it's only 75 cents, but comes in pink, white, berries and roses, and it's just as good. You can get it direct from the Colgate Mfg. Co., 45 S. Fifth St., Brooklyn, N. Y. The price is 75 cents."

So Jimmy is in love with Dorothy.

I wonder how long it will take her to see it!"

$300,000 in Liquors Seized By Gotham Dry Agents

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 28.—Liquors valued at $300,000 were seized by prohibition agents here today in what was described by them as the largest raid here since the Volstead enforcement act went into effect. The largest haul received in the Bowery warehouse of the Menorah Wine Company, where 2,500 cases of wine, each containing three gallons, and 500 barrels of wine, each containing fifty-two gallons, were confiscated.

Ernest S. Lanigan, chief prohibition enforcement agent, who conducted the raid, advised the three members of his staff estimated the present value of this liquor at $250,000. Earlier in the day, some agents visited other places, where they confiscated wine and whiskies valued at $50,000.

You'll Like Trading at Phillip Levy's

You simply have to trust somebody

All businesses have their "tricks of the trade"—and the furniture manufacturing business has its goodly share of them.

Particularly when it comes to upholstering furniture is there opportunity for "shenanigan." Attractive covering material often hides shoddy construction beneath the covering.

Because of this the customer is really often helpless, and must trust some store. As you know, Phillip Levy's policy always has been, is now, and always will be, to make satisfied customers. And you can't make satisfied or lasting customers unless you tell them the truth about everything.

When you are considering your Spring purchases of furniture and rugs won't you try to bear in mind the importance of a store's policy? It will pay you—we are certain of that.
